

Forming Opinions Graphic Organizer

Teaching children to form opinions about what they have read can help them engage more deeply with the texts they are exposed to. It is also a skill that can support students' reading comprehension. This graphic organizer is intended to help students organize their thoughts about a text and frame those thoughts as different types of opinion statements. Students can fill out this organizer after reading or listening to a book at home or in the classroom.

Additional Resources

For an example of how this resource can be used in the home, read the Iowa Reading Research Center blog post "Forming Opinions" by Tracy Donohue.

In My Opinion...

I agree with...

because...

I disagree with...

because...

I think that...

because...

I would like to see...

because...